That then has become the basis of phenomena that we call biopiracy, where seeds such as the Basmati seed, the aromatic rice from India, which we have grown for centuries, is being claimed as novel invention by RiceTec. Neem, which we have used for millennia for pest control, for medicine, which is documented in every one of our texts, is treated as invention held by Grace, the chemical company. This epidemic of piracy through patents as like the epidemic of piracy which was named colonialism 500 years ago. I think we will soon need to name this round of piracy through patents as recolonialization as a new colonialization which differs from the old only in this - the old colonialization only took over land, the new colonialization is taking over life itself.

David Barsamian: Often at the talks you give, there is a question that's always asked, and that is, 'What should I do?' This is what you hear in American audiences.

Noam Chomsky: You're right, it's American audiences. You never hear it in the Third World. DB: Why not?

MC: Because when you go to Turkey or Colombia or Brazil or somewhere else, they don't ask you, 'What should I do?' They tell you what they're doing. It's only in highly privileged cultures that people ask, 'What should I do?' We have every option open to us. None of the problems that are faced by intellectuals in Turkey or campesinos in Brazil or anything like that. We can do anything. But what people here are trained to believe is, we have to have something we can do that will be easy, that will work very fast, and then we can go back to our ordinary lives. And it doesn't work that way. You want to do something, you're going to have to be dedicated, committed, at it day after day. You know exactly what it is: it's educational programs, it's organizing, it's activism. That's the way things change. You want something that's going to be a magic key that will enable you to go back to watching television tomorrow? It's not there.

Those of us who become momentarily disheartened by "the cries of victory" should remind ourselves of that long history in which seemingly insurmountable power fell of its own unbearable weight, but also because of the resistance of those who refused finally to bear that weight, and would not give up.

The branded multinationals may talk diversity, but the visible result of their actions is an army of teen clones marching -- in "uniform", as the marketers say -- into the global mall. Despite the embrace of polyethnic imagery, market-driven globalization doesn't want diversity; quite the opposite. Its enemies are national habits, local brands and distinctive regional tastes. Fewer interests control ever more of the landscape.
